

Dr. Balasundaram is a Clinical Associate Professor at Stanford University and a staff neonatologist at El Camino Health, Community Level III NICU. She finished her fellowship at the University of California San Diego (UCSD) and joined the Stanford neonatology group. She has been working in the community level III NICU since 2015. She is the El Camino Health NICU Family-Centered Care (FCC) committee chair and implemented comprehensive Family Centered care to improve NICU quality goals. Her passion is to provide safe and quality neonatal care in a family integrated NICU, not only in her local NICU but also to other NICUs. She spearheaded the development of national FCC task force by partnering with TECaN and recruiting mentors, speakers, and a few family partners. She is a chair in statewide California Perinatal Quality Care Collaborative's (CPQCC) Perinatal Quality Improvement Executive (PQIP) Quality Infrastructure Committee (QII) and a member of the PQIP executive panel.
